Ruffles the Rescued Seahorse to Return Home

Clearwater Marine Aquarium cared for and will release seahorse impacted by storm

CLEARWATER, FL (Oct. 24, 2018) – Clearwater Marine Aquarium (CMA) rescued, rehabilitated and will release a female lined seahorse, named Ruffles, after she was found washed up on Belleair Beach by a tourist. CMA suspects the rough waves following Hurricane Michael impacted the small seahorse. Ruffles will be released by boat near Clearwater Marine Aquarium on Thurs., Oct. 25 at 11:30 a.m. Media advised to arrive no later than 11:15 a.m.

Lou Banholzer found Ruffles on Thurs., Oct. 11 while looking for shark teeth in Belleair Beach, FL. Banholzer and his wife have been vacationing in Florida for 14 years from their Indianapolis home. Banholzer noted there were more shells than usual along the shoreline after Hurricane Michael ripped through the Gulf of Mexico the day prior. While searching for shark teeth, Banholzer discovered a tiny seahorse with seaweed wrapped around it. Banholzer says he knew the seahorse was in distress, as it was 15 – 20 feet inland from the shoreline. He promptly placed it in a container of water and called the CMA rescue team for help. Banholzer’s grandchildren love to visit Winter and Hope at Clearwater Marine Aquarium when they join him on vacation, so he knew all about CMA’s rescue, rehabilitation and release efforts.

“It’s remarkable that along the 26 miles of Pinellas County beaches, Ruffles was found just in time to be saved and her rescuers knew who to call,” says David Yates, CEO. “The odds of this happening are almost zero. It’s our honor to rescue, rehabilitate and soon release such a fragile and essential creature.”

CMA has drawn international attention for its seahorse rescue efforts, including the famous rescue, rehab and release of Cheeto the lucky seahorse, watched by millions around the world. Cheeto was followed by the rescue, rehab and release of Funyun and Frito.
